

100 Healthier ‘Ready meals’

It is important to reduce our sugar intake to tackle the growing obesity and Diabetes crisis in Australia. More than 1/2 of adults and 1/4 of children are overweight in Australia. Apart from the sugar we add ourselves there is an abundance of sugar already in many processed foods. Many people will be surprised to find there is even sugar in savoury ready meals. It is vital to check the amount of sugar in these products, as well as in other products. The challenge is to find the healthier alternatives but also bear in mind that some of the sugar can occur naturally in some ingredients (like dairy products, vegetables and fruit) and in other cases it may be added. It is the added sugar we are concerned about.

*1tsp sugar = 4 grams so a product with 32 g sugar has 8 tsp sugar. As a comparison, a can of coke has 36g sugar or around 9 tsp sugar.

Also, don't forget to check the amount of fat, saturated fat, protein, salt & calories as well. Some products may be very low in sugar whilst be over 10 % (even 20 %!) fat) whilst others may be high in sugars, say over 10 % sugar, yet be only 2% fat. Ensure adequate protein is also present in the ‘meal’ and that calorie / kilojoules are not excessive, particularly if you are watching your weight. These products listed below also contain less than 420mg sodium per 100g.

There has been a huge increase in the last few years with the numbers and types of ‘Ready meals’ available. There are now over 300 Ready meals on the market and they can be purchased as frozen, fresh or packets/tins in the isles. Ready meals are advertised as ‘complete meals’ that can ‘stand alone’, without advertising on the package for/ needing the addition of, more ingredients like meat/ vegetables/pasta or rice for example. (Where possible though, you can always add more vegetables/ salads to your ‘ready meal’ if you wish!). Some meals can be purchased as single serves, whilst others can serve 2, 4, 5 or even 6.

Cost varies greatly, from a few dollars for a packet/tin to nearly $15 for a fresh ‘gourmet’ meal. Not all brands are available at all supermarkets, but some brands are available at many. All supermarket chains had some healthier options. For a product to be analysed and therefore considered for the list below, a Nutrition panel had to be present on the package, as well as an Ingredient list.

There are over 100 healthier options overall and many of these have been listed below. If you find a product in the supermarket that is not on this list it may mean that it wasn't one of the healthier options. It may also just mean that it wasn't available to view at the supermarket.
